How a Florida Utility Became the Global King of Green Power.

NextEra became a renewable-energy Goliath using tax subsidies to help finance projects around the country and avoiding debt—staying quiet about it all

Who is the world's largest operator of wind and solar farms? It's also America's most valuable power company. Still stumped? It's by design.

"That is a marketing problem...that we foster intentionally," Michael O'Sullivan, NextEra Energy Inc.'s head of renewable development, told University of Notre Dame students in 2015.

The Florida company has grown into a green Goliath, almost entirely under the radar, not through taking on heavy debt to expand or by touting its greenness, but by relentlessly capitalizing on government support for renewable energy, in particular the tax subsidies that help finance wind and solar projects around the country. It then sells the output to utilities, many of which must procure power from green sources to meet state mandates.
