

Bond Case Briefs

Municipal Finance Law Since 1971

Muni-Bond Shopping Spree Shows No Sign of Stopping.

High-income households looking for tax relief drove record inflows into municipal-bond funds in 2019

Investors are heading into this year still eager for municipal bonds after a 2019 buying binge supercharged returns.

High-income households looking for tax relief drove record inflows into muni-bond mutual funds last year, with the S&P Municipal Bond Index up 7.26% during the 12 months ended Dec. 31.

Some analysts project that muni-bond mutual funds will continue that growth in 2020.

“Basically all of that money has driven up prices,” said Nicholas Venditti, a portfolio manager at Thornburg Investment Management.

Continue reading.

The Wall Street Journal

By Heather Gillers

Updated Jan. 2, 2020 5:05 pm ET

Copyright © 2026 Bond Case Briefs | bondcasebriefs.com