S&P AI In U.S. Public Finance: Acute Healthcare Providers Look To AI For Clinical, Operational, And Financial Gains

Key Takeaways

- AI offers not-for profit acute healthcare providers opportunities to improve operational performance and advance clinical care, particularly given the technology's ability to train on and process the vast amounts of data generated across the healthcare sector.
- Most U.S. providers now include AI in their strategic planning, though deployment remains uneven and few have realized material financial gains.
- Providers' financial resources, data infrastructure, management expertise, governance, and the ability to effectively integrate AI into workflows will determine if adoption translates into sustained benefits that support credit quality.
