Bloomberg: Municipal Bond Yields Soar to Highest Since 2011 in Rout.

Takeaways by Bloomberg AI

- Municipal bond yields jumped as much as 15 basis points with the longest-dated securities reaching the highest since 2011.
- Yields on 30-year benchmark municipal bonds rose 14 basis points to 4.89% as of 4 p.m. New York time, the highest since February 2011.
- The move tracks a selloff in US government securities, as investors were disappointed by the Treasury Department's bond buyback target and rising oil prices spark renewed inflation fears.
