Fitch: Positive Rating Drift Returns to U.S. Public Finance.

Positive rating activity has returned to Fitch Ratings' U.S. public finance rating activity, coinciding with improved U.S. economic conditions following a protracted recovery. Downgrades trailed upgrades in 2014, by a margin of 0.7 to 1, compared with the 2 to 1 ratio recorded in 2013, according to a new Fitch report.

The share of municipal ratings downgraded and upgraded was relatively low at 3.4% and 4.9% in 2014, respectively, with rating activity volume at similar levels to 2013. The overall majority of ratings - 86.9% - remained unchanged year over year.

The tax-supported sector represents the majority (57%) of Fitch public finance security ratings and thus led rating activity with largely even results of 3.9% downgraded versus 4.1% upgraded. Rating activity was generally positive across the other public finance sectors.

Fitch-rated U.S. public finance security ratings recorded no defaults in 2014. Over the long-term period of 1999 to 2014, the U.S. public finance average annual long-term security default rate was 0.04%.

Fitch's new study provides data and analysis on the performance of its U.S. public finance ratings in 2014 and over the long term, capturing the period 1999-2014. The report provides summary statistics on the year's key rating trends.

The full report is titled 'U.S. Public Finance 2014 Transition and Default Study' and is available on Fitch's website.
