Chicago Mayoral Candidate Wants to Settle City Debts by Taxing the Neighbors.

“... Candidate Bill Daley, son of former Mayor Richard J. Dailey, brother of former Mayor Richard M. Daley, and Emanuel’s successor as President Barack Obama’s chief of staff (can Chicago’s political dynasty get any more incestuous?), is proposing a commuter tax to try to get more money from suburbanites who work in the city of Chicago. ... adding to the pension crisis via a new city bureaucracy and then trying to get even more money from a reduced population seems remarkably irresponsible.”
