Surging Cash Piles Leave States as Ready as Ever for a Recession.

- Reserve balances rise to record high, budget group says
- Bond market is demanding smaller yield penalties from states

If a recession comes soon, America's state governments are better prepared than ever.

With most states seeing tax collections rise at a faster-than-expected pace, governments have been setting aside more money to help them avert deep spending cuts the next time the economy contracts. Those so-called rainy-day funds have swelled to about $68.2 billion, with the median state having enough to cover about 7.5% of its annual budget, the most on record, according to a report released Thursday by the National Association of State Budget Officers. Next year, those reserves are expected to grow to $74.7 billion.
