The Case for Adequate Public Transportation Funding During the COVID-19 Pandemic: Nossaman

In his Infra Insight Blog post on April 9, Frank Liu reported on the uncertain status of the long awaited federal infrastructure bill. As the federal deficit balloons and election season intensifies, the likelihood of prompt Congressional action on a major infrastructure bill is diminishing. All indications are that it will be sidelined as Congress works on a "Phase 4" coronavirus relief bill to ameliorate the unprecedented loss of jobs throughout the nation and provide further direct assistance to the business community. The Phase 4 bill also should include ample stop gap … Continue
