4 Keys to the Future of Public Finance with Microsoft 365 Copilot for Finance.

Every day, the work of public finance professionals provides the financial foundation upon which all government activities can be assured, from delivering basic services to ensuring overall economic stability. In a world of rapid change, however, public finance organizations at all levels of government are straining to meet new demands.

Across industry sectors, 80% of finance teams report challenges in their ability to do strategic work beyond operations.¹ For public finance organizations, this is made even more difficult due to the pressures unique to government: budgetary constraints, revenue volatility, public demands for transparency, complex regulations, and workforce challenges, to name just a few.

Modernization plays a major role in helping public governments navigate this landscape. New cloud and AI solutions are helping governments reignite economies by simplifying taxation, improving budgeting, and mitigating fraud and corruption. Now, a new level of impact is at hand with the Microsoft 365 Copilot for Finance, an AI-powered, role-based Copilot agent designed to help government agencies accelerate time to business impact. Copilot for Finance is now in public preview and will be delivered in the coming months.
