Muni Bonds Look Cheapest Since March After Rough Week of Returns.

Takeaways by Bloomberg AI

- US state and local government debt hit its cheapest level since the spring after inflation fears caused municipal bonds to see their worst week of returns since April 2025.
- The 10-year AAA benchmark offered almost 71% of the yield on similar Treasuries as of Friday, the most since March, according to data compiled by Bloomberg.
- The improved valuations will likely bring in more buyers, according to Kyle Gerberding, with lighter supply this week also expected to help.
