
$2.3 Billion Rays Stadium Plan Highlights How Venues are Starting to Resemble Utilities.

The Tampa Bay Rays’ proposed $2.3 billion Tampa ballpark advanced this week, with the Rays covering just over half the cost and Tampa restructuring an $80 million piece of its commitment into a revenue-sharing plan meant to generate up to $2 billion over 35 years for city infrastructure. The article also looks at how golf resorts, media production teams, and superintendents are separately using automation, measured sustainability pilots, and credentials to manage venue-related operations.

Continue reading.

marketscale.com